COMPLIMENTS & COMPLAINTS

If you have a compliment or complaint about any service, please let us know. We have a Complaints Policy and investigate all complaints received. Complaints must be reported in writing, signed and sent to us by recorded delivery. When a complaint is upheld, the organisation concerned is removed from DABS National Resource Directory and in extreme cases further action may be taken. Organisations may be reinstated if and when the cause for complaint has been rectified.

DISCLAIMER

DABS aims to provide you with the most accurate and up to date information on the services it lists in this Directory. However, although we ask all organisations to submit an annual renewal form and to keep us updated of changes; we cannot guarantee that the listed organisations are still active and offering the services published. If you believe that any of the information is to your knowledge inaccurate in any way, please contact us so we can look into it and rectify any discrepancy.

General Guidelines And Advice For Victims And Those Working With Them

(In this guidance the terms 'counselling' and 'therapy' are interchangeable.)

The issues to do with abuse and sexual violence:

Looking at the issue of abuse and sexual violence is never easy. Even though we know it happens, most people would prefer not to think about it. If you were sexually abused yourself, you may be only too aware of this. You've probably already come across people who didn't want to know, didn't understand, or didn't believe your experiences. But things have changed. Nowadays it is possible to find people to talk to about it, and to find help and support to resolve its effects on you.

People, both male and female, who have been victims of abuse, particularly during childhood, can lose all sense of self-worth. They may refuse to believe that anyone will love them no matter what they are told and however much others may value them. Some find it difficult to take care of themselves and often hate their own bodies.

The abused person may go for years, even their whole lives, without telling anyone about what happened to them. As a child they may have been threatened with frightening consequences if they did speak out, and even now, as adults, they still believe they would only be condemned, accused of lying or rejected.

Others that were abused needed to suppress and block out the memories to survive. They are often left with painful feelings and unwanted behaviours that they can't explain, and for these, a particular life event, like having a child or losing a loved one, can spark a flashback from their past. Sometimes childhood abuse is discovered when the adult survivor seeks help for another seemingly unrelated problem.

Directory And Book Services (DABS) ~ Call or Text Helpline: 07854 653118

The ways that a child develops to survive abuse can subsequently be destructive in their adult lives. Not feeling anything is one way of surviving abuse, but there comes a time when a person wants to feel and needs to experience their feelings - to feel joy, love, and anger - to live.

Acting and pretending that everything is fine, wearing a 'mask' of normality is another survival technique. This may work well as a child, but in later life it can become too much of a strain. Many victims of sexual violence and childhood abuse will try everything else, and only when it is unavoidable, will they consider dealing with their mistreatment. It is a difficult and brave step. For people who already feel so isolated and mismatched in life, it's easy for them to give up; to think: 'Yes, but it won't be able to help me'.

This is tragic because a great deal of help is available now.

Support And Guidance:

What Is Counselling?

Counselling is an opportunity to talk about problems you're experiencing, with someone who listens and cares. It's based on a relationship of mutual trust and respect that develops between you and your counsellor, so that in time you feel you can talk about any issue and be heard and understood. A counsellor will seldom give direct advice or tell you what to do. The main aims of counselling are to help develop our own insight into problems, help us reassess and improve our coping skills, and to help us find our inner strengths and resources. The overall effect is that we should feel less alone and isolated, less confused and depressed as we begin to understand ourselves better. And less of a victim as we discover we do have choices and can take more control of our lives. Sessions vary in length and frequency depending on the need and how a counsellor works.

Different Forms of Counselling

Telephone & On Line - This can be one-off crisis counselling via a helpline or a regular appointment with your own already established counsellor according to the terms of your contract. Some organisations will be able to phone you back so you don't pay for the call. Free-phone helplines don't usually appear on your itemised phone bill but if this is a concern check it out with the organisation.

For safety reasons we do not recommend telephone, email or internet counselling from the start, where abuse is concerned, because it is open to misuse, and counselling in this way lacks the personal dynamic which can be so effective. However, if these ways are the only ones available to you, or you do not feel ready for one-to-one or group work, they can be good. If this is your choice, thoroughly check out the service being offered. It should be based at a bona fide address where you could send mail if you need to or visit. Counsellors should belong to one or more of the larger counselling associations such as BACP or the UKCP.

Directory And Book Services (DABS) ~ Call or Text Helpline: 07854 653118

Face-to-face - This is usually one-to-one, in the organisation or counsellor's own premises. A lot of organisations, such as rape crisis centres, offer face-to-face counselling free. Private Counsellors charge various amounts, usually from £25 to £60 or more per consultation depending on the area where they work, their experience and skill.

Some offer concessions or other ways to assist those on low disposable incomes.

Group work - This usually involves one or two counsellors working with a group of people. This can be offered by voluntary organisations free or may involve payment if provided privately. Sharing each other's experiences is usually an important part of the process; if facilitated and managed well.

Outreach - This is counselling or support given in the client's home, school, community centre, or any other premises away from the counsellor's usual main base or consulting rooms. This can be helpful for clients who have disabilities or other special needs.

More about Costs and your Investment - Organisations such as rape crisis centres offer face-to-face counselling usually free or for a small fee. Private counsellors usually charge and their fees vary according to qualifications and experience. Some operate a sliding scale according to the income of their clients, or make arrangements to spread the costs over time. Do not reject private therapy because you are concerned about the cost. In many circumstances they may offer their services free, and many counsellors offer a free introductory consultation. Access to counselling may occur via an Employee Assistance Programme, Occupational Health or your General Practitioner; the duration of counselling in these circumstances is often limited.

When it comes to choosing a particular model of therapy or counselling be wary of those who oversell their methods or make promises to cure quickly and painlessly. No counsellor can or should ever make such assertions in the fields of abuse and sexual violence. Some methods do work quicker than others but only if those methods suit the individual client.

If a counsellor claims to use methods that work quickly it is reasonable to expect them to offer it on a basis where you may delay payment until satisfied; after all, if you are expected to trust the counsellor it is only fair that the counsellor trusts you.

Other Forms of Help

Some victims of abuse and sexual violence are able to access help for themselves by private study at home from books and other sources of information. This can be invaluable but is an unusual path to full and sustained recovery.

For those who choose to work this way it is wise to have some outside support. Some use the internet to access counselling or support through chat rooms but it is important to check out the validity of such services. Authentic organisations will have land line telephone numbers and addresses which can be validated together with codes of ethics and practice, complaints procedures and be able to provide details of their qualification criteria and insurance arrangements.

Choosing a Counsellor or Group Facilitator

Seeing someone who's experienced in dealing with childhood abuse and sexual abuse has obvious advantages, but may not be essential. On the other hand, some people want to know that their counsellor is a survivor of abuse themselves in order to feel they could really understand, and many specialist counsellors are those who have recovered from their own experiences of abuse.

You may feel strongly that you want to work with a woman or with a man. Your own instincts about what you want are an important source of guidance.

It may take time and some effort to find the right counsellor or group for you. Be willing to phone around and even to meet several people before you make a final decision. Most counsellors will talk to you on the phone, but it is often far better to visit the counsellor; in that way you will get a better impression and also be able to assess the setting.

The final judge of whether a counsellor or group is right for you can only be yourself, and in the end you must trust your own instincts and how you feel. Ask yourself if you would feel comfortable telling this person intimate details of your life, and will be able to be open and honest with them regarding your material? Do you feel safe with them, do you like their manner towards you and their attitude to your questions? Ask yourself if you feel that you can trust this person. The more open you can be, the more likely it is that you will gain from the counselling or group work.

What Does Effective Counselling Feel Like?

You cannot judge whether therapy is good by the way you feel in the moment. Some experience counselling as a haven they can't wait to get to. Others dread every session and have to force themselves to go. Counselling is not always comfortable.

Generally, you know you're with a good counsellor when you develop more and more skills to heal yourself, when you become able to recognise your own patterns and to feel and interpret your own emotions well.

After therapy one will still encounter the wide range of emotions, from the heights of joy and happiness to the depths of sorrow and rage, that's life. Good counselling is not about avoiding unpleasant feelings or for that matter inducing and extending the pleasant emotions, but much more about how to use all feelings well. This ability results in a state of growing confidence and self-esteem, a being in touch with one's real self; whatever the prevailing circumstances.

As a result of therapy what you should feel is a growing sense of wholeness and peace, which on the one hand enables you to enjoy the good in life, while on the other hand helps you to resolve and settle the unpleasant experiences, problems and feelings much more quickly.

What is the Best Counselling Style for Me?

Independent studies of different counselling methods have mostly concluded that it is the quality of the relationship between client and counsellor that matters most.

The best therapy or counselling is therefore likely to be the one where the relationship between you and the counsellor works well.

What People Should Generally Expect from Counselling, Therapy and Support Services

It is important that you talk to your counsellor about what your expectations and needs are. Just like any other relationship, the more you know and can communicate what you want and need, the better chance you will have of receiving it and speeding the process. No counsellor has a crystal ball, neither can they mind-read so they will not know your needs or what you are thinking without you telling them. It may be easier at first, to write down needs than to say them.

You may be entering therapy for the first time and have no idea of what will happen other than you want to feel better than you currently do. It is very important that you express all your feelings, thoughts, hopes and fears at the start, and then throughout therapy to the best of your ability. Keeping your feelings about what is said to yourself is your right, but it is not very helpful in a counselling environment if you wish to make progress.

Good therapy is not something done to or for you; it is a living process within which you and the therapist play active parts. Therapy works best when it is an honest two-way process of communication, and you have an equal responsibility.

- It takes time to establish a trusting relationship with a therapist, so expect it to take a few sessions before you feel completely comfortable.
- It is important that you go at your own pace and don't overwhelm yourself. Do not try to rush things for a quick fix, or because you feel you owe it to your partner, or other oughts, shoulds and musts.

We all resist change, so do not be at all surprised if you are tempted to quit therapy just before some real changes or breakthroughs are about to happen. Being committed to therapy can change your life. Be prepared to feel some loss and fear because of this.

Therapy is very often hard work, and can be emotionally draining at times. After an intense therapy session expect to feel exhausted for a while. Counselling outcomes depend very much on your resolve to achieve resolution. Others around you may resist your changes and growth and they will usually need time to adapt to the new you.

- Sometimes, therapy can release emotions and memories that have been "locked in time" for many years, and sometimes after a therapy session you may feel like a child for a while, with a child's fears. It is not unusual when dealing with buried feelings and repressed memories, to actually feel that you are becoming worse than you were before you started.
- Sometimes therapy is short term, sometimes prolonged. Be prepared to take whatever time it takes to get the result you want. Becoming a healthier and balanced person can feel very unfamiliar and uncomfortable at first. This is normal and to be expected.
- Your therapist will not be perfect as a person and will make mistakes as all of us do. Hopefully he or she will acknowledge and take responsibility for those mistakes.
- You should expect your therapist to have good, strong, boundaries, to be ethical and to treat you with respect. The therapist should avoid a dual relationship while your therapy is in process and during your subsequent processing. This means generally that he or she is not there as a support between consultations unless that service is part of the contract. The therapist cannot be a close personal friend although one should expect friendliness and support.

Directory And Book Services (DABS) ~ Call or Text Helpline: 07854 653118

Dual relationships include suggestions regarding joint business ventures, provision of accommodation at the counsellor's home or doing work for them. If a counsellor ever flirts or suggests a sexual relationship with you, leave as soon as you can, do not return and consider reporting the therapist to their regulating body. There are many therapeutic methods, models and styles, they can't all suit everybody. We are unique, have differences and find ourselves in different situations. If you feel that the therapeutic model or style used by your therapist is inappropriate for your needs, you should talk this through with your therapist and be prepared to change to a different style or a different person.

Finally, many people believe that once therapy is complete their lives will progress smoothly; that is unreasonable. When you have changed, life will still be difficult at times. You will still be faced with problems, conflicts, loneliness and boredom, as well as achievement and success.

Considerations When Choosing a Service if you are the Victim of Abuse and Sexual Violence

As mentioned, seeing someone who specialises in sexual abuse has obvious advantages, as there will be certain dynamics involved which may be beyond the scope and experience of counsellors who deal with general matters. The questions below may assist you when you approach counsellors or groups:

Useful Questions to Ask a Prospective Counsellor or Group Facilitator

(It may be easier to hand this list to the counsellor)

- Have you worked with victims of abuse and sexual violence?
- How long for?
- What kind of training have you had?
- How do you work with survivors and what are the techniques you use?
- Please tell me about the professional support and supervision that you have?
- Can you work if I have few or no clear memories?
- Do I have to talk about the details of the abuse/incident?
- What is the goal that you aim for with clients?
- What degree of confidentiality do you offer?
- How long do you work with clients on average?
- How much do you charge? Is there a sliding scale or are there other arrangements to assist with the cost? (Do not dismiss the possibility of private counselling – some offer free places or delayed payment)
- Ask for all the terms and conditions ~ in writing.
- Ask for the details of the professional bodies to which they belong, insurance cover and check this out.

Directory And Book Services (DABS) ~ Call or Text Helpline: 07854 653118

If you have issues to do with race, religion, sexual orientation, disability, alcoholism, eating disorders, or other specific problems, or some other aspect important to you, prepare some special questions that will help you determine the attitude and experience of the therapist or group leaders.

You may prefer to choose a counsellor of your race, economic background, sexual preference, religion, or someone who has experiences similar to yourself. If you have such preferences there may be specific organisations that only have counsellors of a certain gender, sexual orientation or religion that can help.

Most organisations are made up of counsellors and helpers of all sorts of backgrounds, beliefs and sexual orientation. If specific attributes are important to you it is up to you to ask.

It may also be worth considering the value of working with a helper that challenges some of your preferences...

Touch

Some forms of counselling and therapy include touching and/or holding, and if this is the case it will be an important issue for you to consider. Touch of any kind, even slight and accidental, can evoke strong emotions. Those feelings could be of comfort and be cathartic, or of discomfort and be damaging. But then, not to touch in certain circumstances could feel like rejection, or not touching may maintain a sense of safe boundaries. Within the counselling profession there is a continuing debate regarding the use of and issues around touch, and a general principle within the guidelines of all bona fide healthcare professions is to 'first, do no harm'.

See: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Primum_non_nocere

First do no harm. One of the principal precepts that all healthcare students are taught, and is a fundamental principle throughout the world. Another way to state it is that, "given an existing problem, it may be better not to do something, or even to do nothing, than to risk causing more harm than good." It reminds the health care provider that they must consider the possible harm that any intervention might do. It is invoked when debating the use of an intervention that carries an obvious risk of harm but a less certain chance of benefit.

For you, it may be wise to mention the issue of touch from the start.

If the style of counselling offered includes touching you may wish to look elsewhere, or to be able to exclude touch.

No counsellor or helper may insist on touch unless you agree.

Directory And Book Services (DABS) ~ Call or Text Helpline: 07854 653118

Reflection

Once you've contacted a number of counsellors compare the way you felt when you were talking with them:

- Which one seemed to understand you best?
- Was it easy for you to clarify what you said when you felt that you had not been understood?
- Were you able to be honest and direct?
- Did you feel that the therapist was focused on you?
- Did you get some useful feedback when explaining your needs?
- Did the therapist seem fairly flexible and at ease?
- Was the therapist open and clear about the boundaries and what is expected of you?

When you start work with a counsellor, you should continue to bear in mind the above points and feel understood and supported.

Additionally, throughout therapy:

- You should feel generally liked and respected.
- You should be treated as a unique individual.
- There should be evidence that the therapist is interested in you and your issues.
- Expressions of emotion and information given should be limited to what is helpful to you.
- You should experience clear and safe boundaries within which you can work.
- You and your therapist should refrain from contact outside the process.
- The therapist should be comfortable and listen to you respectfully if and when you ask questions about any aspect of the process and therapeutic relationship, or if you wish to be critical or to challenge anything.
- You should gain a growing sense of being able to rely on your own feelings and find your own solutions.
- You should generally feel empowered and as an equal with the therapist.

DABS DISCLAIMER

Be aware that while the vast majority of counsellors work to the highest ethical standards, a few do not. At present there is no ultimate and effective independent regulation of the counselling profession.

As things stand anyone can call themselves a counsellor/therapist, they do not have to be trained, there is no legal requirement for counsellors to be insured or to belong to a regulatory body. Ultimately one can be faced with having to take time consuming civil action for damages against an individual if things go wrong. Even here, if the counsellor has no assets it may not be a worthwhile pursuit.

Even if a counsellor does belong to a regulatory organisation and claims to be bound by their codes of ethics, faced with a complaint they can simply resign AND continue to practice. Some organisations specifically state that they exist to protect the counsellor. No counsellor can be 'struck off' as is the case with medical practitioners and therefore many who have behaved unethically continue to work quite lawfully.

It is wise to check that the counsellor you work with is insured. It is also wise to find out a little about any regulatory body that a counsellor belongs to. As a general rule they should belong to a large bona fide well known and respected association that can deal with complaints properly. Some smaller associations do not have the resources to investigate complaints very well and others, as stated above, are formed to protect their members rather than the public. Until there is proper compulsory state regulation this remains the case.

IF YOU FEEL THERE'S A PROBLEM

If a counsellor ever wants to have a sexual relationship with you, get out right away and report the therapist to the appropriate licensing board.

If you don't feel respected, valued, or understood, or if your experience is being minimised or distorted, that's a sign that you're in bad therapy, or at least that there's a bad relationship between you and the counsellor. If you feel there is something wrong in the counselling relationship, or if you get upset or angry with your counsellor, talk about it in your session. Afterward, you should feel you've been heard and understood. However, if your counsellor discounts your feelings or responds defensively, then you're not getting the respect you need. Look elsewhere.

Confidentiality is of major importance in counselling. Your counsellor will not tell anyone what you have told him or her, except in exceptional circumstances and only after discussing it with you. These circumstances usually involve your safety or the safety of others and there are some circumstances where the law does not permit confidentiality. You are advised to check out a prospective counsellor's own code of practice and to discuss this with your prospective counsellor first if you have any concerns.

DABS 'IN-HOUSE' COUNSELLING

It has become apparent that some callers to the DABS Pathfinder Helpline are unable to access the counselling they need and as a response to this DABS offers its own 'In-House' counselling as an alternative.

1. A condensed course of therapy will be offered by the DABS Counsellor~ subject to their assessment with you.
2. This format is most suitable for victims and survivors of abuse and sexual violence.
3. Depending on the circumstances and assessment, it is usual to start with a short number of consecutive days to address the main issues~ then to follow up later with additional days and so on until the work is complete.
4. All DABS counsellors will be members of BACP or UKCP and will have met our terms and conditions.

DABS CONTRACT CONDITIONS

1. If at any point you consider that our counselling is not working or is unsuitable for you, the amounts you have paid will be refunded and you will be released from obligations to pay further sums.
2. The counsellor also has the right to cease their work with you at any point if they consider that therapy is not working successfully. Any fees paid up to that point will be refunded. The DABS counsellor will then support you as much as possible to find the further help you need.
3. You will receive a copy of the counsellors' personal contract details.
4. There is a minimum charge of £50 per hour

All fees can be spread over time by paying a minimum of £20 per month by Bank Standing Order or other agreed method.

In cases of very low disposable income lesser amounts can be negotiated.

SEXUAL ASSAULT REFERRAL CENTRES (SARCS)

SARCs are specialist 24/7 services for people who have been raped or sexually assaulted.

They aim to be one-stop services, providing medical care, counselling and forensic examinations following sexual assault/rape. In some locations they also provide general sexual health services. Facilities are free of charge and provided to women, men and young people. Some centres may be able to assist with child victims.

SARCs are mainly geared to assist in the immediate aftermath of an assault but even if the incident was not recent they may be able to point to other services such as Rape Crisis. SARCs are funded and run in partnership, usually between the NHS, police and the voluntary sector.

SARCs services are available even if victims do not wish to make a formal complaint to the police. Evidence can be gathered and the user can choose to have their forensic evidence samples stored. The intention is that service users will be in a position to take back some control of events and take time to decide whether or not to inform the police at a later stage.

In order to preserve any evidence, it is vital that help from the SARC is accessed as quickly as possible following the incident. For information and to book an appointment, phone the SARC nearest to you.

The Home Office were committed to having one SARC per police force by 2011. Should you need to access a SARC and there is none in your area, phone the next nearest to see if they can assist or contact your local Police and ask for details of their service provision.

VICTIM SUPPORT

Victim Support services are charity based organisations for victims and witnesses of crime. Specially trained volunteers deliver their services and although they work closely with the police and other parts of the criminal justice system, they are an independent charity.

Victim Support exists to help all victims and witnesses of crime right across the UK and Ireland.

Their services are free of charge and confidential.

They run a witness support service and Victim Support lines:

Description of service: As a paragraph here...

Other services, particularly in the private sector, may exist in your area that we are not aware of so it can be useful to pursue enquiries and search other directories, using the general guidelines. They are there to help you find help that is most suitable for you. See Pages 11 to 19.

- ▶ It is also a good idea to contact your local Sexual Abuse Referral Centre (SARC) and Victim Support to see what services and information they offer. See Pages 21 & 22.
- ▶ Even if the services of the organisations we have provided do not seem quite right it is always worth contacting them as they may be able to offer you more promising leads.
- ▶ As mentioned, DABS offers its own counselling which you may wish to consider. Ultimately it is an opportunity for those affected by abuse and sexual violence to do therapy with a guarantee that if it isn't helpful the fees will be refunded. Please see Page 20 and contact us for full details if you are interested.

Description of service: The Southmead Project is a registered charity providing free therapeutic and practical support to adults who were abused as children and have turned to drugs, alcohol and other ways of self-harming as a consequence of that trauma. The charity is active in research; runs very successful group programmes for parents, carers and concerned others of those affected by addiction, and delivers training programmes in abuse, addiction and disclosure across the UK. Research. Trauma, Drug Misuse and Transforming Identities by Professor Kim Etherington looks at the lives of drug misusers in their own words. It was produced by the Southmead Project with funding from European Social Funding and Big Lottery. Over the years the charity has championed other research and evaluation of its services and has amassed data which is used to develop appropriate interventions and to bolster the argument for appropriate support for survivors of child abuse and trauma.
